

Don't Fall for Phone Scams!

Boulder City Police remind residents to be aware of common scams reaching people across the country. Phone fraudsters use the threat of arrest warrants, the promise of romance and even disasters to convice hundreds, sometimes thousands, of dollars from victims. These scams are often perpetrated outside the jurisdiction where the crime occurred, making them tough to investigate.

PHONE
SCAM ALERT!

POLICE SCAM: The scammer claims to be a Police Officer, and may even appear on caller ID as a law enforcement agency. The "Officer" claims there is a warrant out for their arrest for missed jury duty, failure to pay taxes, or other infractions. The scammer demands immediate payment to avoid being arrested, usually asking for eGift cards, or cryptocurrency.

ROMANCE SCAM: Many of these occur on dating apps, but scammers are becoming more brazen, texting or calling potential victims. They use photos of real people to create fake identities, to gain trust and build relationships. The scammer uses this ploy to ask for money from the victim.

CHARITY FRAUD: These are quite common after natural disasters. Scammers seek donations for fake charities or organizations that do little or no work. Donated funds often line the pockets of the scam artists.
